The Department of Humanities conducted a seminar titled "It's ok to not to be ok" which was held for Bhulabhai Vanmalibhai Patel Institute of Management. A total of 200 students of BBA First Year attended this essential seminar. She began by talking about the normal responses people give when asked, "How are you?" She further discussed how to recognize if someone is really doing okay. She further discussed what happens when we don't tell anyone about our feelings. She further discussed what prevents people from acknowledging their problems. She gave suggestions on how to acknowledge their problem, how to seek help, and whom to seek help. The seminar helped to spread awareness about mental health, normalizing discussions about mental health, and giving students insightful advice on how to get help when they need it.
